The telegraph apprizes us that the constitnents of Bully Brooks, not satisfied with re-electing this distinguished specimen of Southern Chlyalry to Congress, subscribed $600 towards paying his fine. We also learn that by the process of resigning and being re elected (himself remaining at Washington, or in its vicinity all the while) Brooks netted the amount of $500 in the shape of "constructive mileage." Financially considered, therefore, his account stands thus:

San Luis; but still on the eastern side of the great mountain chain which divided the waters which ran cant and west to the rising and setting sun. At the head of that valley was the pass described to him by the old hunters. With his glasses he could see the depreasion in the mountain which marked its place. He had taken a local guide from the Pueblo San Carlos to lead him to that pass.

But this precaution for safety was the passport to disaster. He was behind, with his faithful draughtsman, Preuss, when he saw his guide leading off his company toward a mass of mountains to the left; he rode up and stopped them, remonstrated with the guide for two hours, and then yielded to his positive assertion that the pass was there. The company entered a tormous gorge, following a valley through which ran a head-stream of the great river Del Norte, Pinally they came to where the ascent was to bugin, and the summit-range crossed. The snow was deep, the cold intense, the acclivity steep, and the buge rocks projecting. The ascent was commenced in the ucruing, struggled with during the day, an elevation reached at which varies. and the buge rocks projecting. The ascent was commenced in the morning, struggled with during the day, an elevation reached at which vegetation (wood) ceased, and the summit in view, when, buried in anow, exhausted with fatigue, freezing with cold, and incapable of further exertion, the order was given to fall back to the line of vegetation where wood would afford lire and shelter for the night. With great care the animals were saved from freezing, and, at the first dawn of day the camp, after a day-break breakfast, were in motion for the ascent. Precautions had been taken to make it more practicable. had been taken to make it more practicable, had been taken to make it more practicable.—
Mauls, prepared during the night, were carried by the foremost division to beat down a road in the snow. Men went forward by relieves. Mules and baggage followed in long single file in the track made in the snow. The mountain was scaled; the region of perpetual congelution was entered. It was the winter solstice, and it a place where the summer solstice brought in dife-to vegetation—no thaw to congelation. The summit of the sierm was bare of everything but anow, ice and rocks. It was no place to bult.— Pushing down the side of the mountain to reach rushing down the side of the industrial to regard the wood three miles distant, a new and awful danger presented itself; a snow storm raging, the freezing winds beating upon the exposed caravan, the snow become too deep for the mules to move in, and the cold beyond the endurance of animal life. The one hundred and twenty mules, animal life. The one interest and twenty frides, huddling together from un instinct of self-preservation from each other's heat and shelter, froze stiff as they stood, and fell over like blocks, to become hilocks of snow. Leaving all behind, and the men's lives only to be saved, the discomfited and freezing party scrambled back, re-crossing the summit, and finding under the lee of the mountain, some shelter from the driving storm, and, in the wood that was reached, the of making fires. The men's lives were now saved, but destitute The men's lives were now saved, but destints this respectable old Federalist returned, by the same swift conveyance, the following reply:

SEQUEL TO THE INUBDATION IN FRANCE.—The ultivators in the valley of the Lober rest neither night nor day. They follow up the receding lood literally step by step, and sow hemp upon he land as first as it can be rescued from the water. While the men confide thus their last hope of the carth, their wives and daughters harness hemselves to harrows, and hurriedly drag into be soit the prectous grain. Triumphant exhibition of the energy and worth of free labor and ree proprietorship! This courage and industry sould not be tortured from slaves.—Albana Eur. SECURE TO THE INDUDATION IN FRANCE.-The

THE SCOTCH FOR PERSONN AND PREMONT ... Th esidents of this city who are of Scotch origin, tre nearly unanimous for Freedom in Kanses. In his, they are true to the history of the land of his, they are true to the history of the land of heir birth, and to the memory of Wallace, Bruce, Burns, and other illustrious names in Scottish annals. As a meeting of the St. Anlrow's Society, at their rooms the other evening, over a hundred members being present, a Presilential vote was taken, when every man, with me single exception, declared for Fremont and Dayton. A hundred to one is doing pretty well!

New Loconorives .-- Yesterday the Detroi New Locologyes, "Yesterday the Detroit and Milwaukee Rsilway Company received and tre placing on the track two more large-sized new locomotives, from the Boston Locumotive Works. Their names are "Shiawasee" and "Clinton." Including these two, the company have placed on the road, this season, eight new locomotives, of similar construction in all respects. The driving wheels are five feet in diameter, cylinders force inches disputer, length of strake inders fifteen inches diameter, length of strok :wenty-two inches. — Detroit Free Press.

General Williams and America.-To th GENERAL WILLIAMS AND AMERICA.—To the Editor of the London Stav:—Sir,—At Coine, General Williams said that he went to Pailiament to "advocate the preservation of military institutions." I think the grandest answer to that is the dismissal of Mr. Crampton. This fearless act is done by a nation with scarcely a soldier in government pay, and with one or two war ships only on the seas, and further, fearless of our boast of "never being better prepared." of our boast of "never being better prepared." Is this not food for reflection for the people of this country, that this young nation can beard the oldest and richest in Entope?—Thomas
